"Bethanchowk" translates to "thirty-two fields," hinting at the area's past as a fertile agricultural land. "Narayanthan" refers to the sacred temple perched atop the mountain, dedicated to Lord Vishnu, the preserver god in the Hindu pantheon.

Legends abound regarding the temple's origin. One popular tale narrates the story of a pious king who, seeking Lord Vishnu's blessings, installed a holy Shaligram stone (a black, fossilized ammonite revered by Hindus) at the peak. Another legend speaks of a hidden cave on the mountainside where Lord Shiva, the destroyer god, is believed to have resided. Bethanchowk Narayanthan, therefore, holds significant importance for both Vaishnavism (devotion to Vishnu) and Shaivism (devotion to Shiva), highlighting Nepal's rich tapestry of religious beliefs.
