

Tent Peak Climbing - 19 Days

Tent Peak (5663 m / 18580ft), famous as Tharpu Chuli is a popular trekking peak situated in the north-western region of Nepal. The top of the mountain is like a shape of a tent and due to this, it is commonly known as Tent Peak. It sits in the Annapurna Sanctuary, north of Annapurna Base Camp.

Turning the pages of history, Tent Peak was climbed by Jimmy Roberts, one of the best climbers of the twentieth century, in 1956. Ever since that time, the peak has been a destination for both amateurs and professionals. Professionals seem to do this climb to acclimatize well before climbing Annapurna and other higher mountains of Nepal. Likewise, beginners have been attending this peak to gain some expertise to level up themselves.

This Tent peak climbing is best suited to those who intend to step up from trekking to amateur mountaineering. Tent Peak, also known as Tharpu Chuli offers a short trekking peak climbing experience - way beyond simply trekking. Of course, this trip includes the trek to the picturesque Annapurna Base Camp with a few days of peak climbing in the Annapurna region.

Tent Peak is a lower elevated peak and is not as challenging as Island Peak, Mera Peak, or Yala Peak. Tent Peak offers excellent short trekking and peak climbing experience, which aids in your further higher mountain climb expedition. Upon reaching the top of Tent Peak, we can have awe-inspiring views of the high mountains of the Annapurna and Dhaulagiri mountain ranges.

Planning:

A trip to Tent Peak, also known as Tharpu Chuli, takes extensive planning. Investigate the climbing route, obtain necessary permissions, and concentrate on physical preparation that includes cardiovascular fitness, strength, and endurance. It is critical to gather or rent climbing equipment such as ropes, harnesses, crampons, and adequate gear for varied weather situations. Hiring an experienced local guide is a must as solo travelling is banned in Nepal. You can easily hire a local guide from a reputable trekking agency. Before coordinating transportation to the trek's beginning site, arrange transit to Pokhara and secure lodgings. Next, rest days and altitude acclimation are essential along the climb to reduce the risk of altitude sickness.

Plan for permits, guide fees, equipment, lodging, food, and emergency expenditures. Prioritize a medical examination, buy comprehensive trip insurance that covers climbing and emergency evacuation, and follow conservation principles such as 'Leave No Trace.' It is critical to have dependable communication tools for emergencies to have a safer and more rewarding climbing experience in the Annapurna region.

The best time to do the Tent Peak Climbing?

Tent Peak, also known as Tharpu Chuli in Nepal's Annapurna area, is best climbed in the spring (March to May) and fall (September to November). Spring brings consistent weather with pleasant temperatures and bright sky, and brilliant rhododendrons and other blooms adorn the pathways, adding to the picturesque magnificence. This season provides excellent climbing conditions, with greater visibility and less precipitation.

Autumn follows the monsoon season, giving climbers with clear sky, steady weather, and fewer companion hikers on the routes, resulting in a tranquil and enthralling experience with breathtaking panoramic views. Both seasons provide ideal climbing conditions, making adventures safer and more pleasant. However, the decision between these seasons may also be influenced by personal preferences about weather patterns and general mountaineering.

Because of safety issues, technical challenges, and the overall severity of the weather and path conditions, ascending Tent Peak during the monsoon and winter seasons in the Annapurna region is less advised.

Foods and Accommodations:

A climbing trip to Tent Peak consists mostly of teahouses or lodges along the trekking route. These accommodations provide modest but necessary facilities, such as twin-bed rooms with communal toilets. Teahouses are social hubs where climbers may relax, mingle, and eat, and they occasionally have charging stations. Camping becomes increasingly popular when climbers reach higher elevations and get closer to Tent Peak Base Camp. Climbers can carry their camping equipment or hire it locally for greater freedom in putting up temporary campsites along the route. Climbing in this gorgeous environment provides a unique experience.

Meals at teahouses are mostly Nepalese foods such as dal bhat, noodles, rice, and veggies, with some Western-style food and hot beverages thrown in for good measure. Packed lunches, which often consist of sandwiches, boiled eggs, fruits, and energy bars, are essential for maintaining energy levels during the day's ascent. Given the remoteness and altitude, packing personal snacks such as trail mix or energy bars to complement meals is recommended. Accepting the simplicity of these facilities and local cuisine is part of the unique climbing experience in this gorgeous location.

It is always advised to consult with your guide for better food options.

Transportation:

The Annapurna Sanctuary Trek often begins at Nayapul or Phedi. If you want to fly to Pokhara, you can take a domestic airplane (30 minutes) or a tourist bus/private car to Pokhara (approximately 6-8 hours) and then go overland to Nayapul or Phedi to begin your trek. We will either remain in a hotel in Pokhara for the night or begin our adventure if we arrive early. To go to Nayapul or Phedi, we will either hire a private car (shared jeep) or use a local bus. The journey may take many hours, depending on road conditions and the starting place you select.

Our trek to Annapurna Base Camp begins from there. The walking routes are well-marked, and you'll follow them through stunning scenery, villages, and woods until you reach the base camp.

Necessary Permits & TIMS:

Tent Peak Climbing requires obtaining specific permits, including the Annapurna Conservation Area Permit (ACAP) and the Trekkers' Information Management System (TIMS) card. These permits are essential for regulating trekking activities and supporting conservation efforts in the region.

1. Annapurna Conservation Area Permit (ACAP):

To visit the Annapurna area you must get an Annapurna Conservation Area Permit (ACAP). This protected area, noted for its breathtaking natural beauty, varied landscapes, and rich cultural history, is one of the most well-liked hiking areas in the nation.

Cost: Nrs 3000 per person

2. Trekker's Information Management System(TIMS):

For hikers in Nepal, the TIMS (Trekker's Information Management System) card is a necessary piece of identification. It was put into place to improve trekkers' safety and security while also assisting authorities in keeping track of travelers in various hiking locations.

Cost: Nrs 2000 per person for non SAARC tourists and Nrs 1000 for SAARC trekkers.

3. Climbing permit:

A climbing permit is a legal authorization or license issued by a relevant body or organization to individuals or groups that authorizes them to climb a certain mountain, or designated climbing area. These climbing permits differ according to the region and the governmental agency in charge of the area.

Cost: Climbing permits are priced differently depending on the season. For the months of March, April, and May, the cost is USD $250 due to the ideal conditions of clear and mild weather. On the other hand, during September, October, and November, the permit fee is USD $125 for the autumn season, which is a popular time for Tent Peak Climbing. The permit price decreases during the winter and summer months, which are considered off-seasons. Additionally, for December, January, and February, the permit fee is USD $70.
