FAQ

1. Do I need a visa to visit Tibet?

Yes, travelers need a Chinese visa as well as a Tibet Travel Permit to visit Tibet. We assist in securing both the visa and the necessary permits before your journey.

2. Is this tour suitable for beginners?

The tour is suitable for most travelers with a basic level of fitness. While there are some days of travel at high altitudes (up to 5,200m at Everest Base Camp), the trip doesn't require technical climbing skills. However, we recommend being prepared for some moderate trekking and altitude changes.

3. What should I pack for the trip?

You should pack clothing for cold weather (including a warm jacket, layers, and gloves), comfortable trekking boots, a good quality sleeping bag, and essential personal items such as sunscreen, medications, and toiletries. Detailed packing lists are provided upon booking to ensure you're well-prepared for the journey.
